STORY 1 What's Your Interest?

In the story, friends talk about their work interests.

An interest inventory will help you think about jobs that match your interests. Think about the different things you like to do when looking for a job.

Filling out an interest inventory form can tell you what jobs match with your interests and skills.

Interest inventories often match personal interests, such as suggesting a computer job for a person who loves computers.

When a person is a natural with kids, it is not surprising that an interest inventory would suggest teaching as a main interest.

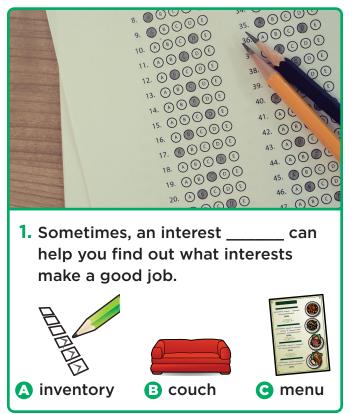

On an interest inventory, some athletes might learn that coaching is a top interest.

My job interest inventory had "coach" as a top match. In looking at your job interest inventory, what kind of job is a good match for you?

Select the correct answer.

STORY 2 An Accidental Look at Job Interests

In the story, a young woman sees that some jobs at a hospital match her interests.

You can learn about job tasks that interest you by watching others in their jobs. Every job has tasks that are interesting to someone.

Nurses work with other healthcare workers to help sick or injured people.

Healthcare workers work together as a team.

People who do delivery jobs move all around the hospital.

Home health workers provide healthcare at people's homes.

When you fill a role at work, you do the part of the work that is assigned to you.

If you worked as a teacher's aide, what is the role you would fulfill?

Select the correct answer.

B sick

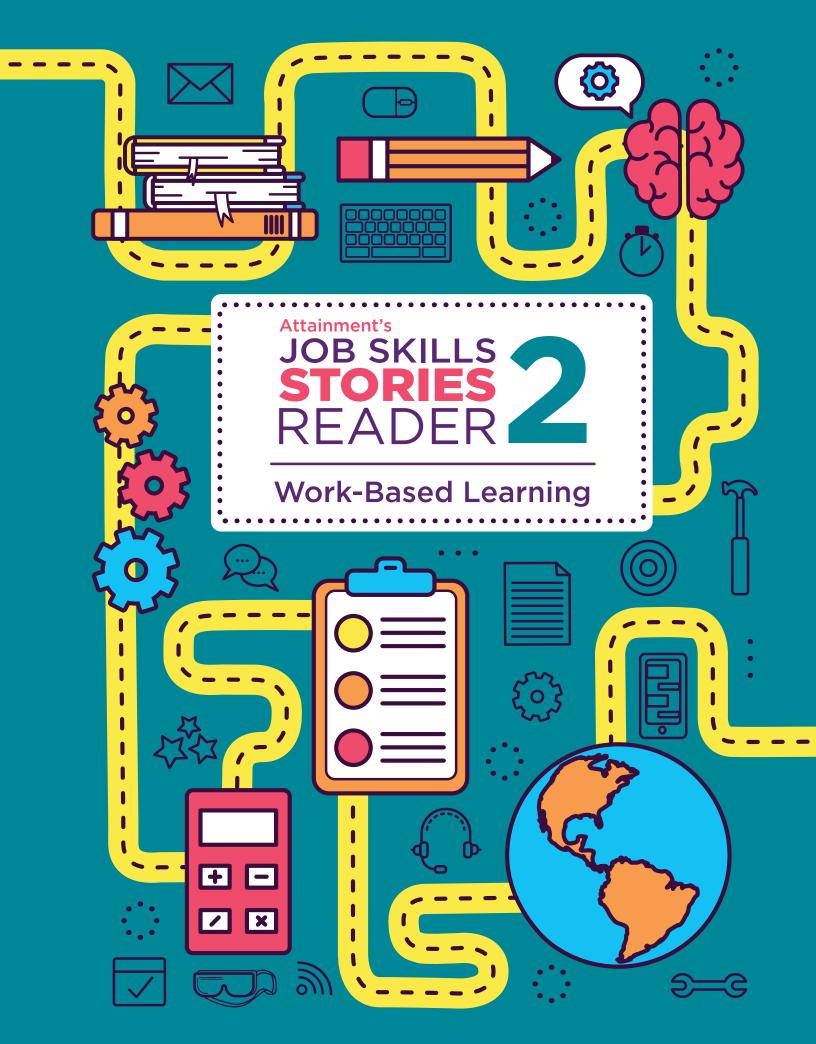

(A) tall

G happy

STORY 1 Joining Strengths

In the story, a group of friends work on a school project.

When working in a group, think about what you do best. Remember that everyone has strengths.

Each person brings strengths and abilities to a group project.

Some people are good at reading and finding information.

Some people are creative problem solvers.

Some people are good at speaking and presenting information.

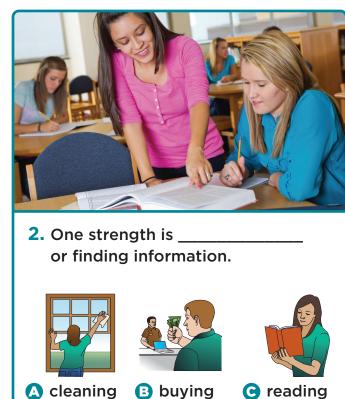

Your strengths are skills you are good at. What is one of your strengths?

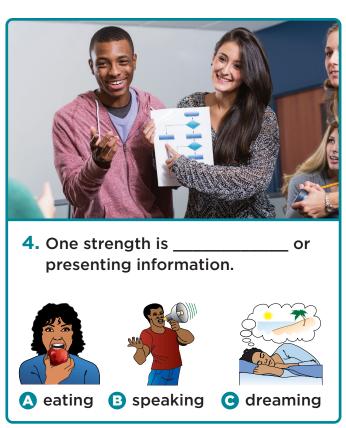

Select the correct answer.

STORY 2 Facing Challenges

In the story, four friends learn about challenges and disabilities.

When you have a challenge, think about how you can handle it. Most disabilities have related challenges.

Living with a disability can be a challenge when doing things. Knowing about a challenge will help you work with it.

If you use a wheelchair, getting to some places can be a challenge.

Communication can be a challenge for people with disabilities related to speech and hearing.

Special communication tools can help when speaking is a challenge.

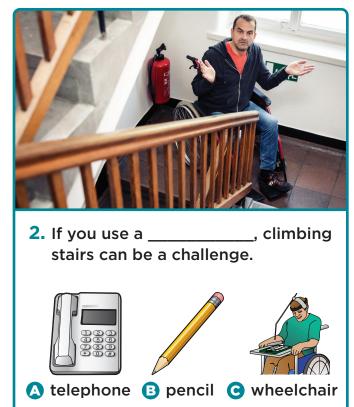

A challenge is a difficulty a person must deal with. Can you think how to handle a challenge that you may have?

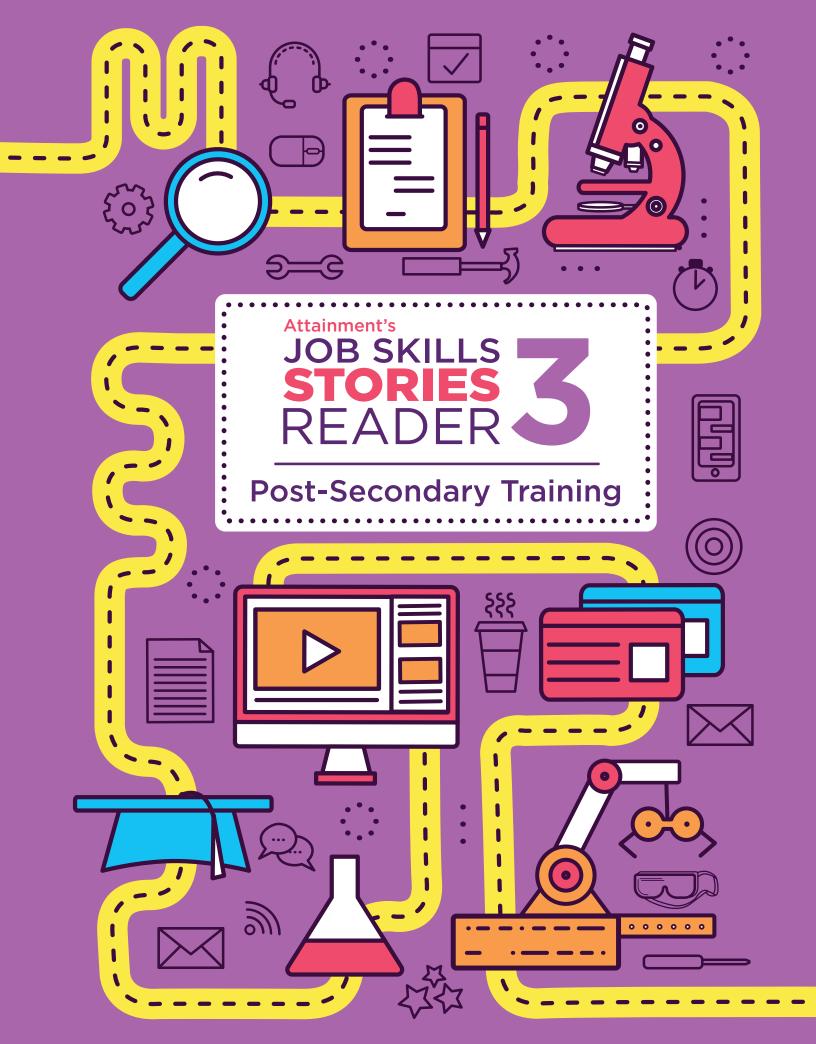

Select the correct answer.

STORY 1 The Right Job for a High School Student

In the story, some friends talk about hospitality jobs that high school students can do.

Students working at a job must have time for both work and school. A flexible work schedule is important if you are a high school student.

A part-time job at a fast food restaurant is one way to earn money while also being a high school student.

If you enjoy helping children, babysitting work is a way to earn money when you are a high school student.

Weekend work at a grocery store could be a good job for a high school student.

A hotel near your home or school could be a place to work after school and on weekends.

Being warm, friendly, and helpful is being amiable. What kinds of jobs require you to be amiable?

3. Where could a high school student work evenings and weekends?

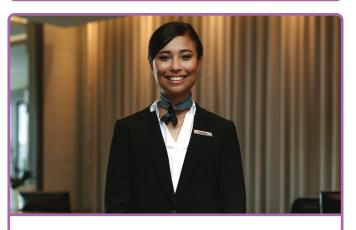

A grocery store

B school

G airplane

4. What is a type of job where it is important to be amiable?

A scientist B astronaut

O hotel worker

STORY 2 Diploma Determination

In the story, two friends talk about why earning a high school diploma is important.

Many jobs require high school diplomas. A diploma shows employers that you were successful as a learner. A diploma can also be referred to as a certificate of completion.

Having a high school diploma is important to become a manager at a restaurant or hotel.

If you want to help children, having a high school diploma can help you get a job at a daycare center.

With a high school diploma, you could work in the healthcare field as a medical assistant or a lab technician.

Earning a high school diploma will make it easier to get a job and have more career choices.

Your teachers will help you graduate and earn a certificate of completion.

Why do employers want workers to have a certificate of completion from high school?

Select the correct answer.

1. If you want to be a manager, what is one thing you will need?

STORY 1 Hygiene Steps

In the story, friends talk about personal hygiene at work.

You should always be clean and neat when you go to work. Having good hygiene is an important step in being presentable.

You need to practice good personal hygiene at work.

Before you go to work, make sure to shower, style your hair, use deodorant, and brush your teeth.

Do not wear dirty clothes to work. Wash and dry your clothes to keep them fresh and clean.

Good personal hygiene is important. Your boss will notice and want to keep you as an employee.

Being presentable is important at work because people do not like to be around others who are dirty, sloppy, or smelly. What would you do to be more presentable at work?

Select the correct answer.

personal hygiene?

Work

in bed

hospital

STORY 2 Time Matters

In the story, family members talk about being on time and managing their time.

You should make sure you are punctual in both your work life and home life. Employers want punctual workers who manage time well.

It is very important to be on time to your job. Make a plan so you can be on time.

Set an alarm to wake up so that you have time to get ready.

Write down what you need to do and how long it takes.

When working on a team, workers depend on you to be punctual and prepared for work meetings.

Being dependable at your job shows that you are a reliable worker.

Why is being on time for work an important part of being dependable?

Select the correct answer.

STORY 1 A Classy Poster

In the story, three classmates work together to create a disability awareness poster.

If you pay attention to others, you will see that many people have disabilities that present challenges. Every disability has its own description and set of challenges.

Some people are born with a disability, and some people become disabled later in life.

Living with a disability can mean having to overcome extra challenges in everyday life.

Examples of physical disabilities are cerebral palsy, epilepsy, spina bifida, and cystic fibrosis.

Examples of cognitive disabilities are attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, Down's syndrome, and traumatic brain injury.

A roadblock is a difficult task for someone to do. Can you describe a time you encountered a roadblock?

STORY 2 One Question and One Friend at a Time

In the story, one friend learns about the other's disability.

If you have a disability, think about when it makes sense to talk to others about it. Telling others about a disability is your choice.

You do not have to share information about your disability. It is your right to keep it private.

Sharing information with a friend, coworker, or boss can help them understand your disability.

When telling someone about your disability, describe your strengths and the things you are good at.

Explaining the challenges you face because of a disability helps other people know how to support you.

When you keep something confidential, you keep it a secret. Has anyone ever told you something and asked you to keep it confidential?

Select the correct answer.

1. Sharing information about your disability is confidential. You can choose to keep it _____.
