Tips

From author SLP
Gisele Morin-Connolly

Success with Core Word Pages

- Designed for students with complex communication needs
- As the core vocabulary expands, the general layout remains consistent
- Ideally students with fine motor ability start with a 36-button layout with only a few messages visible as you teach language
- As student progresses make more messages visible begin at level student can physically access messages (4, 9, 16, or 25)
- Don't expect them to begin "talking" immediately
- Allow the student "wait time" as they may need more time to process and respond
- Take every opportunity to model with the same layout using your own iPad or the student's iPad

Switch Users

Auditory cues make GoTalk® NOW perfect for switch users. Customize your scan settings for use with 1 or 2 switches. It's the only communication app to provide private auditory cues.

3 styles of personal communication pages

Standard

With standard pages, press any communication location for speech, music, video, or to jump to another page.

Express

Express pages build recorded or text-to-speech messages in a speech bar at the top or bottom of the screen. Press the bar to play the messages together in a sequence.

Scene

Build scene pages around a single photo or a pair of images. Arrange visible or invisible hotspots over people or objects in the photo, and the hotspots play speech, music, or videos.
